FIGHTS ON THE FRONTIER.

The Campaigns of Regulars and of Texas Rangers Against Predatory Indians.

A letter from Fort Davis, Tex., says: The Texas Indians have always had a thorough contempt for the blue coats. The state needed railroads and invited the investment of capital to establish tive game birds. It is not so handthese great highways. In 1875 the railroad boom began. With a pluck and enterprise that is characteristically American the great railroad builders ran their lines through the mountain wildernseses and across the desert plains, with an army of determined men in advance to drive back the Indiscs. The railroads have done more to subdue the Indians in Texas than any other influence. Lo can't stand steam. The state in 1874 began to prepare for the immigration inflax which followed. Despairing of protec:10n against the Indians from Uncle Sun, the legislature appropriated the necessary funds and Adjt. Gen. Steele organized, armed, and equiped the froatier battalion of state rangers. Under command of the gallant Maj. Jones this handful of brave scouts atacked the Lipons, the Comanches, the Kickspoos, the Apaches and the Tonkawas wherever they were found, and did in six years what the United States om the states, I met one of these gallant scouts. He had been in all the great Indian fights, and had killed one of Victorio's band when the remnaut of that dashing chieftain's folowers made their final stand in the Sierra Diablo.

"What do you rangers do out here?" inquired my friend.
"We protect the frontier," answered the ranger.

"But," expostulated the newspaper man, "I thought the United States CARRIAGE FACTORY troops were sent out for frontier proteation? 'So they were, and the rangers come out to protect the troops."

He was not far from right. The rangers have borne the brunt of the battle in advance. The blue coats MENDELSSHON. have very discreetly brought up the rear. The rangers followed them, and hunting out their hiding-place boldly attacked them. The charge was made early in the morning. Some of the rangers wore the regulation blue uniform. When the Indians first saw them, as they came running down a rocky hill toward their camp, they thought it was a party of soldiers and prepared Crestings, Balustrades, Verandas, Iron Bank Railings, Window Blinds, Cel-lar Guards; also GENERAL AGENT FOR to make fight, no doubt considerably surprised that the troops dared attack them so openly. Stocking Fish Ponds. ndianapotis Journal There are in general in the United States three sorts of fish ponds, each of which may be briefly noticed: 1 Ponds for Trout-Where vater is very cold and very pure there the muscle, that it cannot ordinarily is no kind of fish more attractive, and give a clear image of any object less perhaps none more profitable, than brook trout. There are in this state, however, very few ponds where the aristocratic fish may be reared, so that I need say here nothing further in regard to it.

2 Ponds of Game Fish-In sny clear pond or lake in this state 'gamey" or carnivorous fishes can be reared Of there our native fishes are the game. The writer has, however, a hking for them as pond fishes, for they are good food, hardy and prolific, and withal morally certain not to waste the fisherman's time, as they take the hook with unfailing accuracy, and takes it for "keeps." Such a fish pond is especially a boy's pond, and the catfish is preeminently a boy's fish. To stock such a pond there is nothing special to do but free it, if possible from gare, dogfish and pickerel, and then to put in as many live fish as practicable of the species desired with minnows and suckers for food. Catfish will thrive in almost any pend which does not dry up in the summer, but

3 Carp Ponds-For most ponds which may be made in this state, no fish is so well suited as the European carp It bears the same relation to the native fishes that our hog does to our wild animals or the hen to our nasome or so delicate as the best of the native fishes. There is no excitement in its capture, but it furnishes food for a hungry world.
